Miley Cyrus Awarded Nobel for Peace!

By Anil Shrivastava 'Musafir'

OSLO/Sweden: Miley Cyrus was declared the winner of the Nobel Peace Prize for 2019 for her efforts in ridding the world of moral values, refusing to contain promotion of drugs, hardcore sex and proliferating insanity among all generations. There were widespread celebrations all over the world after this announcement. "We're having a blast," said some peace-loving citizens of Burkina Faso. Many others took a break from tattooing, piercing and binge drinking to join the revelry.

Miley has been the key to transforming our society "from a world of hate to a world of love," committee chairman Thorbjørn Jagland said while announcing the award in Oslo. "We specially laud her work in connecting with the young crowd," he added. Madonna welcomed the news. She was later heard asking some reporters, "How come the Nobel Committee shrugged me off? After all she (Miley) followed my playbook verbatim." She then addressed a press conference and said: "We are the world's leading exporter of fluff and absurdity. And now the world has completely recognized our talents."

In the midst of all these celebrations, a controversy broke out. Brody Jenne, the gal-pal of Miley and her famous kissing partner and Katy Perry also demanded to be recognized, claiming to have played a major role in enabling Miley to be worthy of the prize. Miley's father, Billy was not far behind. "Miley learned her twerking from me during her formative years," Billy proudly declared.

The leader of the free world was interrupted while watching Miley's twerking clips from the VMA award show. The president tweeted, "@Miley Cyrus – Congratulations on winning the Nobel. Now that you are an alumna, you can nominate me for the Nobel Peace Prize. They will never award me the Nobel the same way they never gave me an Emmy for Apprentice, you know."

Meanwhile, Americans have praised the choice of award and are following Miley's maxim, "Live and shock." Some intellectuals have recommended that Pope and Miley have a debate on religion because she posted the following on Instagram, "Jesus was a radical nonviolent revolutionary who wasn't American and never spoke English, was anti-death penalty, never mentioned abortion or birth control, never opposed tax cuts for the wealthiest Nazarenes."

At the conclusion of the press conference Miley made this statement, "I just want to give back, you know? I feel so empty sometimes. Like, as if my body of work is pointless. I get the sense smart people, you know nerds who watch Jeopardy are laughing at me. I want to make a difference. Oh well, sex and drug is what I know. I've seen some scary things," she continued, "I've seen people being locked up and put in jail for taking drugs, for being vulgar, for not practicing religion, for not dressing the proper way. Yeah, it's scary. But what it made me realize is how lucky I am to defy every norm. We still have a long way to go."
